

ROMIOS GOLD RESOURCES UPDATE by Greg McCoach

I talked with CEO Tom Drivas at the PDAC conference who assured me that the company is planning an aggressive drill program for 2008 on its various projects. The company should have some official news regarding this information in the next month or so.

Our share price continues to suffer with the current market downturn but has showed signs of recovery lately as the stock price was back into the forties for a period. I believe the stock will recover just fine and that this is a story worth waiting on if you are worried about holding your shares at the moment.

Ultimately, I believe that Nova Gold's Galore Creek Project will get back on track in 2008 and give a much needed boost for shares of Romios Gold. In addition, I see Romios Gold's potential to identify a growing resource of major significance on their properties surrounding the Galore Creek Project as very realistic, thus my determination to keep them as a recommended stock in THE MINING SPECULATOR.

Romios Gold remains a BUY.
